Clatsop Community College’s Fiscal Sustainability Plan

The rapidity and depth of the global recession has meant that Clatsop CC, similar to most enterprises, has been forced to “build the plane in the air” to survive in an era of slashed state funding, reduced local property tax revenue, and continued economic uncertainty. Most recently, the State of Oregon’s fiscal problems resulted in a 28% reduction in the State’s allocation to the College for the current fiscal year.

So that we may continue to serve the citizens of this region for another 50 years, in the coming months and years ahead Clatsop Community College will be focused intensely on a fiscal sustainability plan. The College’s fiscal sustainability plan will require more effective management of costs, changes in how and some cases what we do and offer, as well as cost adjustments for our programs and services.

To the last point, what cost increases can students attending CCC expect to see beginning summer term 2011?

First, tuition will increase from $76 to $85 per credit hour. For a full-time student taking 12 credits each term, that will mean an increase of $108 per term. Tuition dollars pay for core programs, services, personnel and infrastructure costs necessary to maintain the essential functions of the campus. Although of little solace to CCC students, tuition and fee increases will be taking place at all 17 Oregon Community Colleges.

Also beginning this summer, students will pay a $5 per term transportation fee, as well as a $1 per term student activities fee. The transportation fee covers the cost of SETD bus service, as well as the expense of maintaining the College’s Jerome and MERTS campus parking infrastructure. All Clatsop students can ride the bus without paying a fare, and last year 51,100 rides were enjoyed by CCC students. It is important to note that should SETD bus services change significantly, the College will revisit its transportation fee in a timely manner.

The $1 per term student activities fee was added at the request of the College’s Associated Student Government (ASG). All funds will be directed toward students, and the money will be used for athletic and other student clubs on campus. Currently CCC does not offer any competitive or intramural sports programs. In lieu of this, the ASG hopes to facilitate opportunities for participation in athletic activities via this student activity fee. All student clubs will be eligible for access to the funds generated from the student activities fee.

In total, a full-time student taking 12 credits currently enrolled at Clatsop Community College will see their cost of attendance (not counting books or specific course-related material or supply fees) increase by $114 per term or $342 per year. For a 9-month academic calendar, this roughly translates into $38 per month, or $1.27 about per day.

The College’s most financially-challenged students will be largely protected through financial aid. A full 30% of all CCC students will have these tuition and fee increases fully or partially covered by financial aid. Moreover, through generous support from community members and the CCC Foundation, we estimate that students will have access to at least $245,000 in scholarship money for the 2011-12 academic year.

As a reminder, and to place this in context, according to the 2010-11 Oregon Student Assistance Commission Report, a full-time student attending Clatsop CC would pay $3,690 in tuition and fees versus $7,217 at one of Oregon’s seven public universities. We continue to believe strongly that for many individuals seeking post-secondary education and training, Clatsop Community College remains a wise investment and an intelligent choice.

Clatsop Community College’s Fiscal Sustainability Plan

The rapidity and depth of the global recession has meant that Clatsop CC, similar to most enterprises, has been forced to "build the plane in the air" to survive in an era of slashed state funding, reduced local property tax revenue, and continued economic uncertainty. Most recently, the State of Oregon’s fiscal problems resulted in a 28% reduction in the State’s allocation to the College for the current fiscal year.

So that we may continue to serve the citizens of this region for another 50 years, in the coming months and years ahead Clatsop Community College will be focused intently on a fiscal sustainability plan. The College’s fiscal sustainability plan will require more effective management of costs, changes in how and some cases what we do and offer, as well as cost adjustments for our programs and services.

To the last point, what cost increases can students attending CCC expect to see beginning summer term 2011?

First, tuition will increase from $76 to $85 per credit hour. For a full-time student taking 12 credits each term, that will mean an increase of $108 per term. Tuition dollars pay for core programs, services, personnel and infrastructure costs necessary to maintain the essential functions of the campus. Although of little solace to CCC students, tuition and fee increases will be taking place at all 17 Oregon Community Colleges.

Also beginning this summer, students will pay a $5 per term transportation fee, as well as a $1 per term student activities fee. The transportation fee covers the cost of SETD bus service, as well as the expense of maintaining the College’s Jerome and MERTS campus parking infrastructure. All Clatsop students can ride the bus without paying a fare, and last year 51,100 rides were enjoyed by CCC students. It is important to note that should SETD bus services change significantly, the College will revisit its transportation fee in a timely manner.

The $1 per term student activities fee was added at the request of the College’s Associated Student Government (ASG). All funds will be directed toward students, and the money will be used for athletic and other student clubs on campus. Currently, CCC does not offer any competitive or intramural sports programs. In lieu of this, the ASG hopes to facilitate opportunities for participation in athletic activities via this student activity fee. All student clubs will be eligible for access to the funds generated from the student activities fee.

In total, a full-time student taking 12 credits currently enrolled at Clatsop Community College will see their cost of attendance (not counting books or specific course-related material or supply fees) increase by $114 per term or $342 per year. For a 9-month academic calendar, this roughly translates into $38 per month, or $1.27 about per day.

The College’s most financially-challenged students will be largely protected through financial aid. A full 30% of all CCC students will have these tuition and fee increases fully or partially covered by financial aid. Moreover, through generous support from community members and the CCC Foundation, we estimate that students will have access to at least $245,000 in scholarship money for the 2011-12 academic year.

As a reminder, and to place this in context, according to the 2010-11 Oregon Student Assistance Commission Report, a full-time student attending Clatsop CC would pay $3,690 in tuition and fees versus $7,217 at one of Oregon’s seven public universities. We continue to believe strongly that for many individuals seeking post-secondary education and training, Clatsop Community College remains a wise investment and an intelligent choice.
