Writing & Literature

PER013531 NEW DEEP DIVING FOR WRITERS $40.00

A deep and fluid exploration of writing craft. In this workshop-style class, writers of all experience will use the theme of liquid, waterways, and swimming to examine their creative writing. Together, we'll read a lot of great models from both emerging and master writers to examine how a great piece of writing is composed. We'll utilize big blocks of time to generate work via prompt then share it in small groups, receive feedback, return to it for revision, and share the second draft the next day. The instructor will guide the feedback, sharing, and revision process so each writer receives useful material and feels comfort in the process. Writers will discuss dialogue, sensory detail, theme, motif, and characterization. The goal is to have every writer come away with one chapter, poem, or piece of short prose that has been deeply examined in a second draft, to learn how to give and enjoy receiving feedback, and to take a luxurious soak in the powerful water of written expression. Friday, November 9, from 5:00 - 7:00 pm and Saturday, November 10, from 10:00 am - 4:00 pm. 2 sessions

The 1993 novel won the National Book Award and a Pulitzer. It follows a struggling single father as he moves to his ancestral home of Newfoundland and restarts his life there. Paralleling life in Astoria, this book is about small town life in a historic port town, old buildings with lives of their own, the connections we have to our ancestors, and finding hope under a lot of bad weather. There will be a lot of close reading and literary discussion, some easy in-class writing exercises, and examination of setting as a character in the stories we read and write. Students are asked to read the novel before class. We will watch the 2001 film adaptation in class. Students should start reading September 24th. Class meets on December 1st. 1 session
