

JSTOR: Fun Tips and Tricks

JSTOR is an amazing platform with more content than ever before. This tutorial covers accessing the database, searching using the Advanced Search tool, viewing publication listings and using the Text Analyzer.

To access JSTOR, start at www.clatsopcc.edu/library (don't start at jstor.org). Use the central search widget and select the Articles tab, where you'll find the link to JSTOR.

If you are on campus, the link will take you directly to JSTOR. If you are off campus, you need to authenticate to access our databases—including JSTOR—using the same credentials you use to access your college email account.

For students, the username is first Initial, last name, last four digits of student ID#, and @students.clatsopcc.edu (example: bsmith5453@students.clatsopcc.edu). The student password format is A@YYYYMMDD (birthdate year, month, day; example: A@20010413).

For faculty and staff, just use your CCC email (and Office 365) username (example: dmcclore@clatsopcc.edu) and password (example: admin123).

You can perform a simple search from the main page, but there are several features that may escape your attention, including Advanced Search, publication listings and Text Analyzer.

The basic search box is pretty straightforward.

Results tend to vary wildly.

Advanced Search opens up more possibilities including Boolean logic operators, such as AND and OR, and a powerful set of limiting options.

From Advanced Search, expand terms inside a box with OR and limit your results by connecting boxes with AND. Try the limiters too. Experiment with your terms and limiters for best results. Think about synonyms for your search terms and pay special attention to your spelling. Try using different fields in the drop-down menus too.
